

Koen Reyntjens

Koen Reyntjens started his medical career as general practitioner. Combining his work with an ER appointment, he decided to train as anesthesiologist at the Ghent University Hospital in Belgium.

He initially worked as cardiac anesthesiologist at the Ghent University Hospital before switching to anesthesiology for hepatobiliary surgery and liver transplantation.

He is a member of the Licage board and ILTS Anesthesia/Critical Care Committee.

He currently works at the University Medical Center Groningen in The Netherlands as member of the liver transplant unit.